WES and AES votes far from easy ones for school directors

By ALISON ALOISIO

Two-thirds of Andover's school directors voted Monday to close the Andover Elementary School.

But two thirds of the entire SAD 44 School Board didn't, and as a result AES will remain open, at least for now.

So will the Woodstock Elementary School, following another board vote Monday to significantly cut to the small school's budget.

Facing an expected $1.2 million budget gap in yet another tough fiscal year, directors put the still more cuts school closures must be found (which would have begun next throughout school year) up for a vote at Monthe district. special meeting.

Asphalt plant battle steams up

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Opponents of a plan, currently in front of the Bethel Planning Board, to relocate a hotmix asphalt plant on the North Road claim to have gathered nearly 200 signatures on a petition calling for the board to reject the proposal.

Petition asks Planning Board to turn down proposal to move current plant across North Road.

The plant, owned by Bruce Manzer, is currently located in the Douglass gravel pit at 274 North Road. Manzer hopes to relocate it across the road to the site of the Coleman Concrete Plant.

The Planning Board is expected to take up the matter at evening, Feb 9, at 7 p.m.

Opponents of the move have protested that during the season the plant is in operation (early April to late November) it creates noisome, potentially

The project, which is expected to cost just over $10,000, was undertaken to stop damage done to the interior ceiling by rain and snow melt — the result, said Board Chairman Stephen Seames, "of nearly 200 years of rot and weather." The project involved removal of the cupola roof, repair any damage there found, replacement of damaged wooden parts. The new roofing was then covered with a high-temprature ice-and-watershield membrane, Seames said, with underlayment and red rosin paper separator sheet. GILEAD POLITICAL MANEUVERING

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to the article of Jan. 27, 2011 regarding the purchase of Cole's Custom Auto.

I am troubled to see the same sort of political maneuverings towe have seen on the national scale. A special interest group is trying to force the selectmen into a hasty decision. The town authorized the selectmen to negotiate a price with the seller on behalf of "all" the taxpayers. One group can't set price and force action while excluding input from the rest of the taxpayers. The citizens of Gilead have the right to know the final price as well as the cost of a well, projected utilities and future maintenance and interest rates. It is not yet clear if additional land will need to be purchased.

Most important of all, we need to know how all of this will affect our tax rate. We live in uncertain economic times, and it is 'reasonable to think that future state funding may be reduced.

There have been no formal discussions in the past regarding the need for a town garage, nor have other options been considered. Some have questioned whether the building is suitable for a garage. A discussion on all of these issues may be helpful before a hasty decision is made to purchase any property.

"We need to allow the selectmen to function in the capacity authorized by the voters. All of our future discussions need to be done in a respectful manner. We are, after all, all citizens of △Gilead. Linda Vieweg

WHAT DO YOU SEE?

To the Editor:

When you walk by the ice tower at Bethel Station, what do you think? Are you someone who focuses on costs, potential lawsuits, a waste of manpower? Or can you, perhaps with some Ceffort, look beyond these doubts?

The willingness to take risk -- to start something that may or may not work, is admirable. It takes courage to begin (especially when everyone is watching) and it takes tenacity to move forward. Courage and tenacity are essential to growth as an individual, and as a nation.

To me, the ice tower tells the world that our community has courage and that we believe great things are possible. I think that message has the power to balance out any expenses, real or imagined, now or in the future. Thanks, Jim and crew. You've made a statement, and it makes me proud to be able to call Bethel my home. Betsey Cooper

RAIL JAM IS ONLY ONE EVENING

To the Editor:

I am a village homeowner, an avid skier, and patron of many Main Street businesses, and I was very sorry to see in last week's Citizen such a negative article about the Main Street

While this event and park-style skiing and snowboarding in general might not be everyone's cup of tea, I can't believe that There are people who seem so unwilling to let young people have their fun, especially when that fun involves being outide, getting lots of exercise and supporting local ski areas and Telated businesses. I have attended both Main Street Rail jams and it actually seems to be quite a family-friendly event. Anyone who wished to have more adult-style fun was welcome to do so at surrounding restaurants, which, contrary to naysayers who scolded organizers for closing the street, seemed to be fuite busy. Only a few hundred feet of Main Street was closed, with an easy detour down Mechanic Street. As for the handdrawn map submitted to selectmen by the organizers, I'm sure fhat they 1) didn't know how to, or even that they should, get access to real tax maps, and 2) they won't be making that mis-Take again. Kudos to Town Manager Jim Doar for bridging the generation gap when it came to navigating town politics. All In all, it amounted to one evening -- just four nours! -- of a little something different that was a fun excuse to socialize in the middle of a long winter. I hope the organizers will take the les-Sons they've learned from the past two years and turn it into an even better event next year.

I also second Betsey Cooper's letter regarding backlash to the ice tower. Bethel really is a special town and I applaud the creativity of the people who keep things interesting.

THIS IS SCARY STUFF

To the Editor:

The following is from the Agency for Toxic Substances & Disease Registry, a part of the Center for Disease Control. It addresses chemicals (PAHs) formed during the production of asphalt: "How likely are polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs) to cause cancer?

The Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) has determined that some PAHs may reasonably be expected to be carcinogens. Some people who have breathed or touched mixtures of PAHs and other chemicals for long periods of time have developed cancer." The complete "Tox-Fags" can be found online at: http://www.atsdr.cdc.gov/toxfags/tf.asp?id=121&tid=25.

For those of us living in the neighborhood near the proposed asphalt plant this is scary stuff, but it should also serve as a wake-up call for anyone who lives, works, or visits Bethel. The Bethel Chamber of Commerce has advertised and promoted Bethel as "Maine's Most Beautiful Mountain Village" for over a decade, with business investment growing into the millions in the effort to draw the world to our doorstep. Couple this investment with countless volunteer hours in support of bringing visitors here, our question is: How long will Bethel be able to use that enticing line of welcome once we have an asphalt plant open up within a mile and a half of town? How many tourists are going to stay and enjoy our inns, restaurants, golf courses and campgrounds if the first thing that greets them is the stench and haze from an asphalt plant looming overhead.? And how many jobs will be lost as a result in those businesses once the Bethel "brand" is diminished? If you do just a little research on the health hazards involved with asphalt fumes and asphalt production you might think again about how important the term "quality of place" should be to us all. If, however, you don't care about living where the air quality will change as a result of an asphalt plant, and you are comfortable with having this plant in your backyard, then so be it. What may or may not happen if an asphalt plant occupies a piece of ground on the North Road is unclear and both sides of the argument can offer little more than speculation. One thing's for sure, the air will change.

Should a Planning Board or government agency have the right to issue a permit for what we breathe? We hope you will attend the Planning Board meeting Feb 9 and express your opposition to this plant because this project could have an adverse effect on many more people than it will help. To sign a petition in opposition of this plant, please contact Gina Douglas at 824-3351.

HAZARD TO OUR HEALTH, AND OUR TOWN

To the Editor:

Last week's letter on the Asphalt Plant proposal for North Road peaked our interest. We live in West Bethel and noticed strong odors during 2010. Folks we asked attributed it to the paper mills and dismissed it. Thinking about it now I recall the difference between the odors coming from paper mills from the new odor, which was "asphalt-ish." We're now very concerned about this issue.

Digging into it revealed long unresolved problems with an Augusta plant, which is owned/operated by a Mr. S. McGhee, who owns the Bethel land where the Manzer plant is proposed to go. Complainants in Augusta have been ignored and out-maneuvered in their efforts to ensure that asphalt emissions remain within safe and tolerable limits. In fact, their success has been limited to passing a moratorium to prevent such plants from locating within the zone in the future.

During our Dec. 8, 2010 Planning Board meeting a board member reminded Mr. Manzer that Bethel had an ordinance against odors leaving property boundaries. Mr. Manzer responded to the effect that he was unaware the plant had any odors. To that strains credulity. Brief research reveals a vast body of environmental issues characterizing them as emitters of offensive odors and dangerous chemicals.

The implications of this issue appear to justify much more aggressive investigation and review than has occurred to date. A group of citizens will do that and prepare documentation to be presented at the next Planning Board Meeting on Feb. 9. We strongly encourage all interested citizens to attend.

noxious, smoke, fumes and odors.

They also contend the plant's airborne effluent creates an image that is damaging to the tourist-and-recreation-based economy of "Maine's Most Beautiful Mountain Village." (For more, see the letters to the editor on this page.

'A crazy lawsuit'

They also draw a cautionary comparison to a similar situation in Augusta, where residents of the city's Grandview neighborhood have battled for nearly a decade against a gravel pit and paving facility which, they say, creates smells, noise and dust that degrade their quality of life and lower the value of their prop-

According to the Kennebec Journal, by last summer the dispute had escalated to the point that Augusta's Legislative delegation - which included Democrat Libby Mitchell, then president of the Maine State Senate - asked the Legislature's Natural Resources Committee to step in.

The committee declined. saving that the matter was a local issue, best handled locally.

Augusta city councilors have grappled, so far unsuccessfully, with ways of defusing the situation, including not renewing the city license under which the facility operates, or passing an ordinance stepping up the level of review such projects must undergo.

They have also tried old-fashioned jawboning.

Following a three-hour long meeting in November, the councilors urged the facility owners to simply consider moving the plant to a more suitable location.

But by that point, one councilor said, given the way the situation was developing, "this is going to end up in a crazy lawsuit."

Lowering the heat

Manzer told the Citizen this week that his Bethel asphalt plant has been in operation since 2008, and there were no complaints until this year, when he applied to move it a short distance across the road. Ironically, in the spring of 2010, he said, he installed a "warm-mix" process at the plant, which actually lowers the amount and composition of its effluent, by allowing operators to keep the product well below its 285-degree boiling point. "In a nutshell the process allows us to lower the temperature of the mixed asphalt by roughly 40 degrees," he said, "and that reduces carbon dioxide emissions by nearly 80 percent."

The WMA process also saves 12 to 15 percent on fuel usage, Manzer said, and eliminates visible fumes when the trucks are filled at the plant, or on the street during the paving pro-

WMA now accounts for 60 percent of the plant's output, he said, "and that number is increasing every year."

'Celladore'

From the 1954-1964 Journals of Beckie Bailey, Installment Three How did you come to live here?

Between our hithering and yonning, our G.H.Q. were at Brick End, an old family homestead that no one could afford to live in. Here we left an accumulation of boxes and trunks filled with things not needed for our next jaunt. One summer, after three fascinating years working for the Davis's on Cape Cod, we came home to find Brick End had been rented. We were invited to stay for a while with my oldest brother, Edward A. He was born in the dark of the moon and had a mercurial temperament. He could be as suave, gracious, and hospitable as an accomplished European diplomat; he could also behave as though he were made of snips and snails and puppy dog's tails. He had been recently divorced and with him were his two children: Ted, sixteen and Anne McClure, ten. Their house, a half mile down the road from Brick End and my next brother, T.R. and family, was tiny. B.B. was always ready to try anything that was new and different. I felt a bit of trepidation about living with children and more about keeping house for a "poison neat" relative. But I decided that anyone who had studied the French Revolution, read "Machiavelli" and "Alice in Wonderland" should be able to cope with anything. So we accepted the invitation and moved in.

Miss Fan, my mother in town, and numerous relatives all waited to see how this situation would work out. We had a gay time. B.B. built a wooden shower in the shed and in a community of bathtubs only, this was an attraction. We were a bit crowded but it was summer and we all took turns sleeping on the porch. Ted and a visiting cousin would stay awake half the night out there, playing on harmonicas and whistling. On an eighty-degree day, Anne wanted to make a baked Alaska. It was a hot job on a wood stove in a low-ceilinged kitchen, but it came out perfect and we all sat outside under the trees "lapping it up." The cat went up a tree, no cajolery could lure it down. After two days of hearing it howl, we cut the tree and rescued it.

One evening T.R. phoned. He had just read about a place for sale that might interest us. In those days, real estate advertisements were less direct than now; the agent lived in another town. It was a popular sport to try and ferret out exactly what property was being offered. We decided that it might be the Sears place on the south end of the mountain, though this had been a summer place for fifty years and was never expected to come on the market. We talked about it a bit that night. In the morning we phoned the agent. He was devious but did say that it was the Sears place. A long and tragic illness had drastically changed their future plans. He already had several interested buyers but he finally consented to meet us and show us about. Neither of us had ever seen the place. We left the main road a quarter of a mile from the village, drove one mile uphill through the woods, and came out into an open field which had started to grow up to bushes. The house sat on the top of the hill, protected on the north by the rise of the mountain. (Later we cleared this section of all but the biggest trees, exposing rocky ledges that looked much like Cezanne's painting of the forest of Fountainbleau.) The house was an architectural monstrosity. To an original brown shingled Cape Cod structure had been added on three sides of a flat-roofed porch. Six dormer windows poked out here and there. There were two original chimneys and another at the east end, a huge outside three-flued affair fastened by guy wires to a new roof. A small barn was attached to the woodshed. There was a deep well and a hand pump, but no electricity. We were taken in through the north shed door. Opening the opposite south door, we looked out. To the east, south, and west over the field, across the treetops were mountain ranges and a dome of blue sky. No houses in site, no noises to be heard. We went through the inside quickly. B.B. took a look at the barn. We silently returned to our starting point and sat a few minutes in the agent's car. "Well, what do you think of it?" he said.

. Bethel director Pat Nasta worried that cutting in other schools instead would have a more negative effect overall. "The middle school and high school have taken many hits," she said.

She said she favored instead giving the responsibility for keeping AES open — and paying for it — to the voters of Andover.

"If a district does close a ·· school, the town in which it is located has the option of raising itself the amount of money equal to the annual savings in order to keep the school open. For Andover, that amount is estimated at $214,000. But, countered Akers, at that -; price, coupled with any other tax increase for SAD 44 itself, "that's not really a choice."

Longtime Woodstock director Marcel Polak also opposed closure.

"It's probably not the responsible decision," he said. 'The responsible decision is probably what my colleagues are going to be doing — to close. I'm just looking now selfishly, about looking myself in the mirror, and say-! ing how much I support education, and thinking I'm going to vote to close a school. I'm going to pass the buck now. And passing the buck " is essentially passing it to the · 'taxpayers. It's probably not the responsible thing to do, because we're not sure what 'they're going to do. We never know what they're going to

The vote was then taken by roll call, with the results as 'follows:

Newry director Deb Webster ·was absent.

About 65 people attended - Monday's board meeting, many speaking against closing either the Andover or Woodstock schools.

Several people from Andover said they did not feel the district had provided enough advance notice about Monday's vote on their school.

The closure issue was also discussed at last week's regular board meeting, but several said they were not aware it was on the agenda.

It said, in part: "We all know from experience that when the heat is turned off in a building and it is vacant, it begins to deteriorate rapidly. This, in itself, would cost the district taxpayers money in the future if the building was to be reopened and put back in service.

"I' further believe that the costs of running the Crescent Park School will increase more than we think due to factors that we are not aware of at this time:

"In reviewing the numbers that we received from Dr. Murphy at [last week's] meeting, I believe that it will be in the best long term interest of the district to keep the Woodstock School open and make some operational changes to cut costs.

WES proposal

After the AES vote had been taken, the board turned its attention to WES, with its approximately 80 pupils. At the request of directors. Supt. Dave Murphy presented a plan to cut $120,000 from next year's WES budget in order to keep the school open. Last year's operating budget, he said, totaled $641,000.

The proposal would combine the fourth and fifth-grades into one classroom, saving an estimated $40,000 for one teaching position.

The resulting class size of 22 or 23 pupils is the same number as would be expected if WES pupils were sent to CPS instead, Murphy said.

Other positions eliminated would be an educational technician for special education ($26,700) and a library educational technician ($24,170).

The special ed teacher would take on more responsibility, while the school secretary would cover the library, Murphy said.

Principal Jolene Littlehale's current half-time principal/ half-time teacher position would be changed to full-time teaching principal. She would serve as half time special education/half time Title I teacher, at a savings of $28,300. Smith said that with those reductions, he would favor keeping the school open.

Polak said he would prefer to revisit the option in the context of the whole budget proposal, which has not yet been presented.

Directors voted by a show of hands 10-6 in favor of the cuts. The action on WES still leaves a gap of nearly $1.1 million, caused by an anticipated loss in state aid and increase Directors must now decide whether to cut elsewhere in the overall budget, pass the increase on to taxpayers, or a combination of the two. The current year's budget is $9.2 million. Murphy said the Finance Committee will now begin the process of developing budget priorities for the board to consider.

He said he does not expect specific proposals to come to the board until late February or early March.

The board meets next Feb.

WatchMECreate Challenge #2

WatchMECreate (WatchMECreate.org) is a collaborative effort between ACTEM & the MLTI. It consists of a series of serious challenges put out to Maine's grade 7-12 schools, asking students (and perhaps teachers) to collaboratively develop and submit video responses. While posed as a "student challenge," it is assumed that some students may come to it independently while others will be directed towards it by a teacher

Challenge #2 is called WatchMERead and asks

Frenzy." This spring they also plan to grow food in a new greenhouse at the school. As GOT Farms got underway this school year, Prescott learned of a statewide competition entitled, "Watch Me Graduate," which challenged high and middle school students to create films showing one thing they believe should be done to encourage students to stay in school. The high- and middle-school winners would receive a prize of $500, to be used to implement their idea.

The competition is an outgrowth of the Maine Learning Technology Initiative, which got its start with former Gov. Angus King's laptops-for-students computer program.

Prescott thought the farm project and film contest could be connected, and she talked to Mike about it.

"At the time, the GOT Farms group (which Mike has also been involved in) was in the process of planning the Fantastic Food Frenzy and field trip, where we had the opportunity to visit several educational gardens in western

"I suggested the farming concept would be a great focus for the film, and the field trip would be an excellent time to collect quality footage," she said.

With camera in hand, Mike went with the group to visit Buckfield High School, Gould Academy and other locations.

Mike interviewed students about their own gardening projects. Said one female student from Buckfield, "I like working and making a difference for our school.'

After returning to Telstar, Mike got in front of the camera himself. In answer to the challenge question, he answered, "Farming."

He argued that a typical high school student body is roughly divided into an academics-oriented group and a more hands-on, technologyoriented group.

A farming program like GOT Farms, he said, is an activity through which they can come together for the benefit of both, and where stu-dents who don't fall easily into either category may find their own place - a place that might motivate them to stay through high school.

Mike edited his own spot Graduate_Winners.html

into the other footage he had shot, creating a two-minute film. He submitted it in late October.

In early December, "I went to see Mrs. Prescott and she told me I had won," he said. "It was an exciting moment." Mike's was one of 30 films submitted, but only one of two that were created by individuals rather than by teams. He hopes to use the $500 to bring more gardening opportunities to Telstar High work out the details. He also continues to make progress on his own educational path, filming an interpretation of a novel for English class, as well as a Health class message on the dangers of cocaine. "I plan to stick with filmmaking and get as much education on it in high school as possible," he said. And beyond?

"I've thought of myself as a filmmaker, going all the way," he said.

draft. Before the planning process began, 10,000 of those acres were already part of what is known as the Mahoosuc Ecoreserve.

The plan adopted also includes 2,379 acres categorized as Non-mechanized Backcountry (allowing only nonmechanized recreation access), compared to 1,692 acres in the final draft.

The expanded area again includes more acreage on Baldpate, as well as at higher elevations on Sunday River Whitecap and Slide Mountain.

The Visual Class 1 designation for the Sunday River and Bull Branch requires more stringent timber-harvest limits. The designation is intended to prevent logging operations from coming all the way to the edge of the stream, Hotopp said. But the purpose goes beyond just visual appearance - it is also intended to protect habitat.

"Some of the most productive soils and habitats are near streams. It's not just aesthetics," he said.

characterized Hotopp both the Sunday River and Bull Branch as "recovering streams," which had been significantly impacted in past decades by logging and/or farming.

The MLT had recommended that additional areas be protected. The percentage of wild areas in the region — about 20,000 compared to 600.000 total acres in the 16 Mahoosuc towns in Maine and New Hampshire — is about 3 percent. Hotopp said he wonders whether that is enough to protect wild habitat.

But, he said, from MLT's perspective the plan is a move in the right direction. The BPL 'listened to the public, and to the recreationists," he said.

Hotopp also praised the BPL's vision for timber management, which focuses on saw logs - "high value timber, not biomass." he said. Recreation

On the recreation front, the new plan allows for Nordic skiing in the Bull Branch valley receives early and lateseason snow, and advocated for the opportunity to groom the area for Nordic use. He also supported a ski corridor between the Bear and Androscoggin river valleys.

A representative from the Maine Handicap Ski Program also favored opening Bull Branch for Nordic ski grooming, but not for snowmobiling.

The adopted plan recommends BPL partner with groups interested in developing the Bull Branch valley for Nordic skiing. It also notes that significant winter recreation activity takes place in the Grafton Notch State Park and the rest of the unit without active management by BPL. Activities include ice climbing, winter camping, snowshoeing and Nordic ski-

The plan recommends that BPL gather more information on such activities and work with recreation groups to develop communications and determine appropriate parking areas to be plowed to support the recreation.

BPL comment

Amy Hudnor, BPL senior planner, explained why the protected areas were expanded since the final draft:

"Many individuals and organizations (including the Mahoosuc Land Trust, the Appalachian Mountain Club, The Wilderness Society, and the Bethel Outing Club) spoke at the final draft public meeting in December, and also sent written comments to case that more Special Protection and Backcountry Recreation zones should be allocated in high mountain areas, especially around the Baldpates.

"BPL staff considered their comments as well as considering BPL's management needs. An expansion of Special Protection and Backcountry Recreation areas was made around the Baldpates-this was an effective way to give even greater protection to the sensitive natural commu-, nities and backcountry recreation experience here, while continuing to manage timber in lower elevation areas to provide a diverse forested environment and generate high quality timber products to support Bureau operations and the local economy.

"In high elevation areas around Slide Mountain, Mt. Carlo and others southwest of Route 26, the ecology and recreational experience was already broadly protected in the final draft resources allocations, so no changes were made.

"Members of the public as well as conservation and recreation organizations also spoke and wrote about the increasing importance of recreation in some of the streams in the Mahoosucs — particularly the entire Bull Branch for fishing, sightseeing and swimming. BPL chose to give. a Visual designation to the portions of the Sunday River, within the public lands, and along the Bull Branch.

Saturday, Jan. 29, I got my first ride in a snow groomer. The complimenrides were given by members of the Greenstock Snowsports Snowmobile Club as part of Bethel WinterFest 2011. My ...driver was Gary Okenquist, president of the club. He explained that the snow groomer we were riding in was built specifically for grooming snowmobile trails, which can be as narrow as nine feet wide. Greenstock Snowmobile Club covers the towns of Greenwood, Woodstock, Bethel, and the townships of Albany and Milton. The riclub maintains and grooms more than 70 miles of trails and oversees the maintenance of another 30 miles of trail in Bethel. All of this work is done by club volunteers. country skiing. On Sunday, Jan. 30, I snowshoed up the Mt. Will trail to the South Cliffs. The trail was well packed and maintained. However, some sections, particularly at the higher elevations were icy, tricky to navigate, and it was sometimes difficult to maintain a foothold. From the cliffs there is a beautiful view of the Sunday River Valley and parts of Bethel. If you decide to hike un Mt. Will. I recommend taking a partner and starting early in the day. As always when snowshoeing, take a cell phone and watch the weather. It might be difficult to get down the trail safely in a snowstorm.

There is a new auto repair shop in Bethel. In mid-January Francis (Sam) Westleigh opened Cross Street Auto Repair at 48 Cross Street (next to the car wash). Sam has been an auto mechanic since 1974 and formerly worked at Bethel Auto Sales. He does both minor and major auto repairs. The shop is open on weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 12, by appointment. The shop's phone number is 824-2342.

The children at the Bethel Learning Center have created two beautiful snow sculptures near their center at the corner of Station Place and Cross Street. The toddlers built a snow person complete with long arms and blue gloves. A few feet away the 3-5 year olds carved a long, sinewy stegosaurus with life-like orange feet and blue and green bony dorsal plates and spikes gracing her back. A sign posted near the stegosaurus says, "A work in progress." The sculptures merit a close-up view.

Here it is. February already! So far I've managed to write the correct date on checks that I've made out.

Now I'll have to remember to change the month as well. Tsk! Why is that time seems to move faster as I get older?

It was a busy skiing weekend for those youngsters plying the skinny skis. Saturday was the Sassi Memorial Race at Black Mountain, where local ski teams from Telstar and Gould were competing. Boys from Telstar and Gould skied among a field of 235 skiers. and the girls from Gould competed among 192 skiers. Sad to say, there is not a girls' team at Telstar. The Middle School has a goodly share of female racers, but something seems to happen between 8th and 9th grade.

Sunday saw the Gould Nordics competing in Weston, Mass., at the Eastern Cup Race, which is, among other things, a Junior Olympics qualifier. The boys skied in a mass-start skate race among 101 skiers, many of them college students and other adults. Andrew Nesbitt came in a very creditable 19th. They also skied a sprint race with 108 competitors.

The girls skied their skate race with 87 skiers and their sprint race with 86 skiers. Shelby Aseltine came in an astounding number 5 in the sprint race. Remember, they were competing with college students and other adults. Both males and females represented their school well.

Jennifer Pitcher from South Arm Road reports that she has had a number of redpolls and finches. She says they seem to come every other day. Traveling along with them have been a couple of white-winged crossbill females. Finally a few males also visited. Jennifer asks if anyone else has seen them.

Saturday was a good ski day here in Bethel, too. The trails at the Bethel Inn were just about perfect, and I had a good workout there. I met our daughter, Martha, on the trails a couple of times. We were going in opposite directions -- she skate-skiing in a counter-clockwise direction, and I, classic skiing clockwise around the course. Sun was out, temperature in the high 20s, and no wind. Who could ask for anything more?

It's that time of year when gardeners study their seed catalogs and dream of crops to come. Mike is planning to build another raised bed, thereby doubling our available vegetable garden. I shall try to keep my floral ambitions within reasonable bounds, because I don't relish too much more sod-busting. It will be interesting to see which of the myriad bulbs I planted last fall come up and where. Well, you don't expect me to remember where I planted them, do

Once again, I ask that you get in touch with your news and views. Otherwise, my column will be little more than a personal memoir. Reach me at dhoeh@megalink.net or 824-celebrations this week. On Saturday, Jan. 29, Ruby Coolidge attended the 50th Anniversary of her brother Earl and his wife Pat Hart. Congratulations from the whole neighborhood. It always makes me feel good to hear about couples like this. Belated Birthday wishes go to Tonya Hebert Lewis, who, on Jan. 31 celebrated her 22nd birthday at her home with 11 guests in attendance. Tonya, it will be easy for me to remember you birthday as my oldest sister in Germany shares this special day with you.

Our amazing runner, Cherri Crockett, had her first official run for 2011 on Sunday. She ran in the Go in the Snow 5K in Topsham to benefit a niece of a friend who is battling cancer. It was an unbelievable run through the snowy streets of Topsham and just as it was finishing, it began to snow. It was a beautiful day for a beautiful family. She hopes more people will get out and start exercising and helping others at the same time. Thank you Cherri, this is a good thought for all of us to think about.

Now, on to the answer to the Trivia question. Part of the Town Report, dated Feb. 15, 1890 stated "To the Selectmen of the Town of Bethel, County of Oxford and State of Maine: We the undersigned citizens and legal voters of said Town request you to put an Article in the Warrant: - To see if the Town will vote to raise $2,000 to build a steam mill at East Bethel." Call me at 824-3220 or e-mail han@megalink if you would like to know who the petitioners were.

In conclusion of this week's writing, here is author Orison Swett Marden's take on the importance of humor, "A good laugh makes us better friends with ourselves and everybody around us." Thus keep on smiling and laughing. Have a great week.

driveway entrances, subdivisions and major reconstruction of buildings. Jennifer Turner was 13 years old in 1985 when the car she was riding in was smashed into by a hit-andrun pulp truck in Newry. The daughter of Craig and Lillian Turner of Hanover, Jennifer grew to adulthood as a quadriplegic and required extensive medical care. Seeking adult independence she moved to Auburn where she lives today. Because of continuing developments she needs to move to a facility with lifting equipment to help her within her home. The American Society of Civil Engineers heard of Jennifer's situation and began a project to help her by building a fully equipped house for her. Contractors are donating much of the labor and materials while retailers will provide many of the furnishings. Tammy (Milligan) Nosek, a childhood classmate of Jennifer and now from New York helped get things going.

The project was delayed last year when the house lot provided by the city of Auburn proved to be too difficult to build on and the city provided a second lot.

A short time ago Jennifer's situation was featured on WCSH-TV and a video of the interview can be found on the TV station's website. It is expected that construction will begin soon. However, there is a possibility of funding shortages. Anyone wishing to help Jennifer get into her new home may donate to ASCE Turner Project, PO Box . 1212, Auburn, ME 04211. Tammy Nosek may be e-mailed at tirossie@tectonicengineer-- ing.com

· Hanover Deputy Town Clerk skipped out of work on Friday because she was in Florida with three friends. Most local folks figure it's better to take Route 26 when the weather conditions make roads slippery -- but, then, they don't rely on GPS to guide them. GPS directions don't include info on length and steepness of inclines, or width and conditions of roads, I guess. Many drivers, unfamiliar with that road, don't anticipate such steep inclines, and therefore shift incorrectly, and have problems making the hill -even when it is properly sand-

Mona and I returned from a very enjoyable 10 days in Hawaii late Monday, Jan 31. We spent five days on Oahu and five days on Hawaii (the "Big Island"). On Oahu, we staved at a military recreation facility at Bellows Air Force Station (now referred to as the Marine Corps Training Facility, Oahu) in a cottage at the beach there. This is a beautiful, quite secluded area with nearly three miles of white sand beach out of sight and sound of most of the traffic. noise and hustle and bustle of the rest of the island. We thoroughly enjoyed walking the beach and relaxing in sunshine and temperatures ranging from nighttime high 60's to daytime low 80's.

We quickly learned to stay away from the Honolulu side of the island during the morning and afternoon rush hours, when all roads there are clogged with stop-and go traffic. Therefore, we did our sightseeing around the island between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. except Saturday and Sunday when we started our day early in order to find places to park near the most scenic coastal areas. It seems that nearly

There have been several trac- all the locals spend their week- turned out to be duds. By the ends recreating at the seashore, surfing, swimming, pic-... nicking and just hanging out. There are few places to find quiet seclusion on Oahu. Since both Mona and I have been to Hawaii on previous occasions, we avoided most of the usual "tourist traps" and spent our time visiting favorite scenic seashores like the huge surfing waves at Makaha on the north shore of the island, the rocky promontories near "the Blowhole," Hanauma Bay and the western shore on the other side of Pearl Harbor. On Sunday we drove to Schofield Barracks Army Base, where I planned to drive through Koli Koli Pass to the western side of the island. There is a beautiful drive through the pass on a road on the military reservation which snakes down the leeward (western) side of the island, which is desertlike, with cactus and numerous mounds containing military munitions storage. I was disappointed to find this road closed even to retired military personnel, as this is one area that Mona has not seen. We retreated and found a lovely beach with a shady spot to enjoy our picnic lunch. We then stopped for a return visit to Pearl Harbor, where we spent most of our time in the book store before returning to Bellows AFS. We did enjoy the spectacular views of the Arizona Memorial and the other historical military artifacts around the harbor. I don't believe there is a more beautiful tropical paradise anywhere than some of the places on the island of Oahu. We just hate the traffic and crowds in the Honolulu/Waikiki area. We were glad to board our Hawaiian Airlines flight to the "Big Island," I'll describe our expe-

FOR 13 WEEKS!

SMH THERAPISTS COMPLETE PROFESSIONAL SEMINAR—Stephens Memorial Hospital Physical Therapists Marion Sandstrom and Jodie Wilson, and Occupational Therapist Jennifer Bennett have recently advanced their professional education by attending, "Manual Skills for the Upper Quarter" a six-contact hour Board Certified program held in Portland Jan. 19. Bennett, Wilson, and Sandstrom are all Bethel residents and have worked at SMH for 14, 25, and 32 years, respectively. The seminar emphasized new evidence-based, hands-on training in the treatment of neck and shoulder problems. Up-to-date information of rehab following shoulder and neck surgeries was received. Medical research was examined and treatment skills were practiced in hands-on labs. At SMH, Jodie now uses the new skills with patients during their acute hospital stay, and Jen in the outpatient rehab department located in the Ripley Building. Individuals who could benefit from these advanced treatment approaches include patients who are post-surgical, post-stroke, individuals with work injuries, or athletes. Therapists Marion and Jodie also treat all ages at the Bethel Family Health Center. Pictured are, from left: Sandstrom, Bennett, and Wilson.

Zach Stone and Liam Gallager both showed improvement and all of the new racers; Ali Turnick, Kaitlynn Brown, Luke Davis, Josh Eliot, Alex Duclos, and James Newkirk made it through the course with decent times. Nice job by all for pushing the limits on a very fast course. - Coach Eliot
